TOPIC OF THE CONFERENCE

The EU Green Deal needs healthy soils that can provide ecosystem services. Degradation pressures caused by human activity affect the soil through physical and chemical-biological damage. The European Commission presented the new Soil Strategy to 2030, the first European soil protection legislation, including the new EU science and innovation program "Soil Deal for Europe". It aims to establish 100 living laboratories and light houses that will become a milestone in the transition to a healthy soil throughout Europe. As part of soil health monitoring, there will be an obligation to collect data on soil health and evaluate them according to a harmonized methodology.

The goal of the conference is to point out the need to address the current state of soils, to monitor the properties and evaluate agricultural, forest and urban soils, to propose sustainable management with the aim of transforming the EU into the first climate-neutral continent. The 2030 Soil Strategy, the Soil Monitoring and Resilience Directive, the European Soil Observatory (EUSO) and the of EU Soil Mission Board is very good news for soil scientists. The topics of soil sustainability should resonate not only in the ranks of scientists, but also among experts in state and public administration or practice.

Blocks of lectures

1. Research and development of agricultural soils in the context of new initiatives
2. Research and development of forest soils in the context of new initiatives
3. Innovative approaches to soil monitoring and evaluation (modelling, IT tools, pedometrics, Remote Sensing)
4. Section in English (any topic)

TRANSPORT CONNECTION

The village of Liptovský Ján has an excellent transport location, it is located right at the exit from the D1 highway between Liptovský Mikuláš and Poprad, also there is a train connection with the west-east direction and vice versa. It is 7 km from Liptovský Mikuláš (accessible by bus and car).

The village is a spa resort located between the Low and High Tatras in the Jánská dolina. In the cadastre, healing thermal water in a natural spring is located. The village belongs to the monument zone, there are about 50 mansions and manor houses from the 16th and 17th centuries. More information is available at www.janskadolina.sk.

FIELD PEDOLOGICAL EXCURSION

A field pedological excursion will be prepared in the vicinity of Liptovský Ján (pedological pits in the forest ecosystem) with a visit to interesting locations (possibly other locations, we will specify).
